Regrets and a Dismissal Over the Arrest of Consul Canavarro.

When Consul Canavarro called upon Minister Cooper Friday morning to officially notify the Government of his arrest by a mounted patrolman Wednesday night for riding a wheel on the Waikiki road without a light, he was received most cordially and verbal regrets were expressed by the Minister for the unfortunate incident. Later the Minister addressed officially the regrets of the government to Mr. Canavarro and notified the consul of a visit Marshal Brown would pay him in reference to the matter.

At 3 o'clock in the afternoon Marshal Brown called at the Consulate and expressed the regrets of the department for the arrest and also notified the consul that the offending officer had been discharged. Mr. Canavarro expressed himself as perfectly satisfied, and thanked Mr. Brown for his promptness in dealing with the matter.

THE ALARM.

The fire at 1:30 was of dry vines on a lattice at the Monsarrat premises, Union street. A child with matches started it. No damage.

DOES NOT DAMPEN.

Clinging Plants that Do Not Moisture or Injure Walls.

A recent author shows, says the Independent, that a prevalent notion that the Japan ivy and similar plants which cling to the wall by rootlets make the walls damp, is the reverse of the fact. Tons of water are evaporated daily from these leaves in the growing season—an amount which it is almost impossible they could draw from the earth through stems which at the ground are seldom thicker than one's finger. The rootlets suck water from walls to help supply this waste; besides this they cool walls by their shade in summer. The action of the famous English ivy on ruins is referred to as practical proof of the drying character of these rootlets; the mortar is so hard and dry that it is difficult to demolish these old walls. If the branches are allowed to get into gutters or other water conduits so as to choke the flow in heavy rains, it is said the walls may be rendered damp; but not by the mere clinging to the walls of the plants themselves.

FIRST RACER.

Fast Rowboat that Was Built in New York in 1830.

A number of wealthy gentlemen in New York City founded the New York Boat Club in 1830, and for them Mr. Francis built, says a writer in St. Nicholas, the first yacht ever constructed in America. He was able, you see to turn his hand to almost anything which had to do with sailing on the sea. Some Canadian gentleman wanted a racing rowboat to beat the boat of some of their friends from England who were coming over from the motherland to give them battle at Quebec. Mr. Francis was called upon to build the boat. It was of mahogany, brass fastened, and it weighed only sixty pounds, a remarkably light racing boat for that day. It was four-oared and was thirty feet long. They called it the Eagle, and it well deserved its name, for it won the race against the crack boats of the English. It was the first rowboat for racing purposes ever built in America.
